

Scientists Who Believe the Bible

Professor Dr. Werner Gitt is a retired German scientist who was involved in the research of Cybernetics and Information Technology. He gained his degree in engineering from the Technical University in Hanover, and his Ph.D. from the Technical University of Aachen where he was also awarded the prestigious 'Borchers Plaque.' As well as publishing numerous research papers, he has written several books and appeared on television. For many years he was Head of the Department of Information Technology at the German Federal Institute of Physics and Technology. And what's more, he is a strong Bible-believing Christian!

He believes that, "the Bible is not only a suitable, but also the ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL interpretative framework for understanding the world, and all life in it. No science can work without suitable premises. I now know, too, that our lives will not work apart from the premises in the Bible, given us by our Creator." So, science doesn't cancel out a belief in God, after all! And this scientist certainly believes that the Bible is "given us by our Creator".
